

Faith in God's Promises

"Let us hold fast the confession of our hope without wavering, for He who promised is faithful." — Hebrews 10:23

Faith is more than believing that God exists. Biblical faith is trusting God enough to believe that every promise He has made will come to pass. Hebrews 11 reminds us that the great patriarchs were not commended merely because they believed in God, but because they trusted His promises and ordered their lives accordingly.

Abraham left his homeland without knowing his destination because he trusted God's promise. Sarah overcame her initial doubt and believed that God would fulfill His word. Isaac, Jacob, and Joseph all looked beyond their present circumstances to the future God had promised. None of them saw the complete fulfillment of every promise during their lifetimes, yet they remained faithful because they knew that God is always true to His word.

The same challenge confronts Christians today. We often face uncertain circumstances, unanswered questions, and delayed blessings. Like Abraham, we may not know where God is leading. Like Sarah, we may struggle with doubt. Like Joseph, we may have to trust God's plan even when we cannot see how it will unfold. Genuine faith continues to trust because it rests not on circumstances, but on the character of God.

Unlike people, who sometimes fail to keep their promises, God has never broken one. Every promise He has made is certain because He is faithful. He has promised forgiveness to those who obey the gospel, strength for those who remain faithful, and an eternal home for those who endure to the end.

May we cultivate the same faith demonstrated by the patriarchs—a faith that not only believes in God but confidently trusts His promises. Such faith will sustain us through life's uncertainties and lead us safely to the heavenly city whose Builder and Maker is God.

By: Michael Dale